Dear Commissioner Henney,

I am writing because of my concern over the use of the recombinant bovine growth hormone (rBGH) in dairy cows. Recent evidence uncovered by the Canadian government (while researching the safety of rBGH for possible use in their country) indicates that the FDA may have been less than thorough in its studies of the safety of this hormone.

I am outraged that the FDA, on whom we depend to safeguard our health, would allow a potentially harmful material to be marketed without thorough research. Our health must be considered over the pressures of industry!

I demand that the permit for rBGH be recalled immediately and a more thorough review of its safety be performed.

Thank you for your time and consideration.
